1 December 2017 Opportunities Available

Are you giving your guests a room or an experience?

In the good old days, not any Tom, Dick or Harry could open a hotel. But times have changed. With a surge of alternative accommodation types such as serviced apartments and AirBnB, the competition for hotels has grown exponentially in the last five years.

Enticing guests to stay with you has become one of the biggest obstacles in the hotel industry, since guests now have a range of options available to them -- many of which are far more affordable than a traditional hotel. What many guests want from hotels also seems to have changed. While some are still looking for the familiar comfort that hotels provide, others are longing for a local experience. Hotels are uniquely equipped to cater for both.
