Wellness Tourism is big business in Asia Pacific

The Hilltop Bathing View at the iconic Peninsula Hot Springs in Australia's Mornington Peninsula, Victoria. (TOURISM AUSTRALIA)

According to the Global Wellness Economy Monitor, Australia is in the top five wellness tourism markets in the Asia Pacific. Australia's clean, green environment; Indigenous plants with health properties; and an emphasis on cultural traditions create a competitive advantage for Australia as a destination for wellness tourism.

Wellness tourism encompasses experiences which directly relate to maintaining or enhancing personal wellbeing, including visiting a health spa, sanctuary or wellbeing centre. Australia boasts several areas of high natural amenity which lend themselves to wellness tourism. Byron Bay in New South Wales and Daylesford in Victoria have grown in prominence as wellness destinations due to their variety of health and wellness activities on offer. These offerings are appealing to increasingly health-conscious consumers who are willing to spend on their wellbeing.
