16 June 2017 Opportunities Available

How to avoid the most common job interview mistakes

You've found the role, made an application and been invited for an interview. What happens next will see you celebrating your success or trying to work out what, if anything, you did wrong.

To spare you the post-interview angst, here are some of the most common mistakes people make in job interviews and how you can avoid them.

Not knowing enough about the company

One of the key questions an interviewer is likely to ask is what you know about the organisation. Before going to a job interview you can learn about a company by visiting their website, checking out their social media, or reading their annual report. Glassdoor.com is a great resource for researching a business, its culture and the experiences of candidates who have been interviewed previously. If it's possible to visit the company as a customer, this can be a good way to experience first-hand what they offer and understand how they operate.
